

Poliquote

COLTON WOYTAS | SPRING 2016

Introduction

Problem

Only 57.5% of eligible American voters voted in the last federal election for president.

Mission

PoliQuote is intended to increase political engagement and accountability by providing clear and true information about currently serving representatives without bias.

PoliQuote is a platform from which to base the accountability of candidates and representatives to their campaign promises and public statements by using direct quotes and providing them in context.

Goals

- ① Increase the public's knowledge of actions being taken by elected officials towards fulfilling the promises they have made.
- ② Increase the public's understanding and awareness of how the government is organized and operates at various levels
- ③ Maintain an unbiased position while presenting factual and cited information in a manner fair to all candidates and citizens

User Personas

Frank,
46

Frank is a father and a husband. He works hard at his lifetime blue-collar job in a warehouse, and has earned a living for his family this way for 28 years. He coaches both his son's baseball team during the summer, and is respected within his group of friends for his humility and wisdom.

Frank is worried about the security of government benefits, and he would like to find out if the state governor he voted for has been accomplishing promises during his campaign.

Derek,

Derek is a few years out of college and into his career. After graduating with an electrical engineering degree, he chose to stay close to home and family and accepting a job with the local branch of a national corporation. He's ready to move away and begin the rest of his life somewhere else.

Derek would like to become more informed about a few of the candidates in the upcoming election in his district so that he can place a more informed vote for his future.

Visual Design (State Select + Expand)

The image displays two side-by-side mobile device screens, each showing a different stage of the Poliquote app's visual design for navigating state-level political information.

Left Screen (State Selection): This screen shows a dark map of the United States with individual states outlined in white. The state of Colorado is highlighted with a blue rectangular overlay. In the top right corner of the screen, there is a modal window titled "Colorado, U.S.A." containing tabs for "Executive", "Legislative", and "Judicial". Below these tabs are four circular profile pictures with corresponding names and titles: John Hickenlooper (Governor), Joseph Garcia (Lieutenant Governor), Cynthia Coffman (Attorney General), and Wayne W. Williams (Secretary of State). At the bottom of the modal is a portrait of Walker Stapleton (State Treasurer). The entire interface is set against a dark background with a light gray header bar.
